

ABSTRACT

A communication system for providing temporary wireless telephone numbers to wireless call devices. The communication system comprising a first switching system and a service control point. The first switching system is configured to receive a registration request from a wireless
5 call device and process the registration request to generate a registration message for the service control point that includes a request registration information. The service control point is configured to receive the registration message and process the registration message to automatically assign a temporary wireless telephone number to the wireless call device.